Night stay: Srinagar

Doodhpathri or 'Valley of Milk' is a serene meadow in Kashmir, India, renowned for its lush green landscapes and rivulets of milk-white water. Situated at an altitude of about 8,957 feet above sea level, it is a relatively unexplored destination, offering tranquility away from the bustle of city life.

The meadows are cradled in the folds of the mighty Himalayas, providing picturesque scenic beauty. The origin of its name lies in the milky white water of the river that flows through the meadows, which is believed to be rich in milk-like density and purity. Locals narrate legends that link the pastures to the Prophet Solomon and extol its virtues. Doodhpathri is not just a visual treat but also a haven for trekkers and nature enthusiasts who wish to explore the pristine valley. The meadow is dotted with deodar and pine forests, and during summer, the area blooms with a variety of wildflowers.
